They are already popular favorites as the protectors of life and property. When once they are educated scientifically--and their pluck and technique will not suffer from the process--they will then come to the front, like the scientific corps of the army and navy, as men versed in that higher knowledge which fits them for any sphere in life. The achievement of this desirable end will be helped on by the establishment of firemen s colleges, such as that contemplated for some years by New York city, and, if Fire Commissioner O Brien can accomplish this object, if politics can be kept out of it and compe.ent scientists and practical firefighters can be appointed as instructors as well, a great forward step will have been achieved. WHAT PHILADELPHIA NEEDS. Colonel Robert B. Beath, president of the United Firemen s Insurance company, in adverting...
