 To Franklin Ford
 The circling Spheres go racing down the voids,
 And the inconstant Seasons change and fade,
 While one unfading and ennobling Faith
 Flames in your mental skies; fair as the dawn
 That ushers in the glad and triumphing day
 When Truth, the Ultimate, the Avenger, Shall bear to men the tidings
 Be Of Hope! The earnest of the new intelligence
 When she shall still the old, unhappy Fear,
 And scatter blessings where all faith was dead,
 And drive Despair, unfriended, to the Pit.
 The sane and vivid vision that you saw
 When all the world was blind or would not see,
 Shall yet enrich the nation of your pride
 With organized, august publicity;
 Yet clear the Temple of the Verbalists
 And function blithe Fact-finders ere they pass
 To the Unbroken Silence toil endears.
 And if, for a brief space, the stealing hours
 May darken counsel and make wild the ways
 That lead to Unity; ah, then not less
 Shall men of mettle muster to the Cause,
 The old, good Cause...
